IT HAS BEEN AN HONOR to direct the Museum of New Mexico Press for over twenty-six years. As I retire from the press to pursue other endeavors in book publishing, I continue to advocate for and support the Museum of New Mexico Press, its books and authors, and other New Mexico publishers who promote and preserve the cultural legacy of the state. I also want to acknowledge the contributions of key staff members over the years, including art director and production manager David Skolkin and former editorial directors Mary Wachs and Lisa Pacheco. David is retiring from the press after thirty years and will continue to design and package museum and trade books independently. And for many decades, Mary and Lisa acquired and edited books of significance that fulfilled the press's mission to entertain and educate audiences about the rich arts, history, and cultures of New Mexico, the Southwest, and beyond. Together, these colleagues have created a beautiful and meaningful legacy in print.

THE WHITE ORCHARD

SELECTED INTERVIEWS, ESSAYS, AND POEMS

By Arthur Sze

A poet's creative process comes to light in this latest book by National Book Award recipient Arthur Sze. Sze has assembled an illuminating selection of seven interviews, three essays, and poems to examine the evolution of his compositions, his decades teaching poetry, and his deep connection to the cultures and landscape of New Mexico.

A son of Chinese immigrants who was born and raised in New York City and on Long Island, Sze first studied science at MIT. His call to write poetry pulled him away from that academic pursuit, but the sciences would continue to influence his writing. In 2024, Sze received the National Book Foundation Science + Literature Award for The Glass Constellation: New and Collected Poems (Copper Canyon Press). Sze spent over two decades as an educator, teaching creative writing and poetry to Indigenous students from across America at Santa Fe's Institute of American Indian Arts (IAIA). In this compilation, Sze is interviewed by his former IAIA student, award-winning Diné poet, editor, and visual artist Esther Belin.

Sze's fluency in his parents' native tongue, along with study at the University of California at Berkeley, allowed him to delve into Chinese poetry, both as a student and translator of classical and contemporary works. The White Orchard shows his wider connection to Asian American poetry across the United States and how he has drawn inspiration from translating Chinese poetry into English. Arthur Sze is one of our finest poets, and this collection demonstrates how literature can enrich us all.

Arthur Sze is a poet, translator, and teacher. His twelve books of poetry include The Glass Constellation: New and Collected Poems; Sight Lines, winner of the National Book Award; Compass Rose, a Pulitzer Prize finalist, and forthcoming in Spring 2025, Into the Hush (Copper Canyon Press). He is professor emeritus at the Institute of American Indian Arts and was the first poet laureate of Santa Fe. His poems have appeared in publications including The American Poetry Review, The Atlantic, Best American Poetry, Boston Review, Conjunctions, Harper's Magazine, Harvard Review, The Kenyon Review, The Nation, The New Republic, The New York Review of Books, The New York Times, The New Yorker, The Paris Review, Poetry, The Yale Review, and Pushcart Prize anthologies. Sze's work has been translated into fifteen languages, and he has given readings internationally in Beijing, Cardiff, Delhi, Havana, Hong Kong, London, Medellín, Paris, Rotterdam, Taipei, and Vilnius. Arthur Sze has lived in New Mexico for over fifty years.

HERITAGE AND CHANGE

SOUTHERN PAIUTE AND CHEMEHUEVI NUWUVI BASKETRY, 1870 TO 2022

By Catherine S. Fowler, Judith W. Finger, John J. Kania, and Larry Dalrymple

The Southern Paiute and Chemehuevi people have lived for countless generations in the southern Great Basin of western North America in a homeland that extends to parts of Utah, Nevada, California, and northern Arizona. Referred to by a variety of names and spellings in the Euro-American literature, they are the people whose name for themselves is “Nuwu”—or collectively, “Nuwuvi.” Nuwuvi basket weaving is a traditional and evolving art form that connects weavers to their ancestors and to the natural world.

This publication, years in the making, includes chapters by Catherine S. Fowler, Judith W. Finger, John J. Kania, and Larry Dalrymple that explore the cultural history of the Nuwuvi people, the work of known weavers, and the characteristics and development of Nuwuvi basketry since the 1870s. It focuses particularly on the fine-coiled work produced during the American Arts and Crafts Movement period of the 1890s to 1930s. Working separately and together, the authors analyzed over 1,200 baskets in museum collections across the United States, from the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C., to the Lost City Museum in Henderson, Nevada. They researched the baskets’ collectors—from John Wesley Powell to Helen J. Stewart and Isabel T. Kelly—and conducted interviews with contemporary weavers. In order to give the reader as broad a visual understanding of Nuwuvi coiled baskets as possible, images of baskets from the collection of Judith and Andrew Finger are included. The book is lavishly illustrated with archival and contemporary photographs.

Catherine S. Fowler, emerita professor of anthropology at the University of Nevada, Reno, has a long-standing interest in the cultural history and basketry of the Nuwuvi and other Great Basin peoples. Judith W. Finger is an independent scholar and collector. John J. Kania was an independent scholar and respected dealer in antique baskets made by Indigenous peoples, including the Nuwuvi. Larry Dalrymple is an independent scholar and collector of contemporary Indigenous basketry.

LAKOTA WOMEN'S ARTS QUILLWORK AND BEADWORK

By Marsha C. Bol with Thomas Haukaas

Foreword by Rhonda Holy Bear

For it is the mothers, not the warriors, who create a people and guide their destiny. —Luther Standing Bear, Land of the Spotted Eagle

Much has been written about Lakota Sioux Indian men and their arts, especially those made in support of their hunting and warrior culture. Historically, however, very little scholarship has addressed Lakota women and their art forms. This lack of attention is still true today, even though the Lakota Sioux are the best-known of the Plains Indian tribal nations and their traditional regalia is widely recognized. These are the people of Chiefs Crazy Horse, Red Cloud, and Sitting Bull and of the infamous Battles of the Little Big Horn and Wounded Knee. In Lakota Women's Arts, Marsha C. Bol gives recognition to the significant contributions made by Lakota women—particularly through their quillwork and beadwork embroidery—in supporting and maintaining the foundational values of traditional Lakota society. The author explores the underlying motivations that have impelled Lakota women to practice these arts over many centuries, with particular focus on the decades since 1820. To explicate the values expressed in these artforms, Bol gives primacy to first-person voices from members of the Lakota Nation, past and present.

In addition to presenting an astonishing array of historic and contemporary Lakota art made by both women and men, this lavishly illustrated volume will provide today's Lakota artists unprecedented access to historical examples of quill- and beadwork that are tucked away in museums and private collections. As Rosalie Little Thunder notes, "Lakota people must have the chance to see these [historic Lakota] things as a way of knowing where they've been so that they would know where to go."

Marsha C. Bol, PhD, is director emerita of the Museum of International Folk Art in Santa Fe, New Mexico. Over the past four decades she has worked as a director or curator at the Museum of International Folk Art, the New Mexico Museum of Art, the Carnegie Museum of Natural History, and the Maxwell Museum of Anthropology. She was formerly associate professor at the University of Texas at San Antonio. Bol holds a PhD in art history from the University of New Mexico and is a specialist in Native American art and architecture and Spanish Colonial art and architecture. Thomas Red Owl Haukaas, MD, is a physician and an enrolled member of the Rosebud Lakota tribe. Over the last twenty-five years his artwork in media ranging from quillwork, beadwork, and doll making to ledger drawing and fabric design has earned numerous awards. His work in both traditional and contemporary forms is in the collections of major art museums and galleries.

LIFE IN CHIMAYÓ'S OLD PLAZA

By Don J. Usner

Thirtieth Anniversary Edition

New Preface by the Author

"Now, as I contemplate stepping into a role as [Chimayó] elder, I hope the sentiment of community endures and that this book inspires new generations of Chimayosos to continue building toward a bright future—while remaining rooted firmly in a remarkable history."

—Don J. Usner, from the Preface (2024)

"Brimming with voices, las voces de la gente ... the first-person narrator who returns again and again to the text like a knowing and trusted pariente inviting the reader to sit for a while in the Plaza del Cerro. —Jim Sagel

"Quite simply ... the best history yet made of a northern New Mexico community. It is thorough, balanced, gracefully written, and blessed with an insider's access and affection."

—William deBuys

Chimayó is renowned for its Hispano master weaving families, lowriders, and its storied church, El Santuario de Chimayó. The old Plaza del Cerro had once been the village's center place, where locals gathered to pick up mail, socialize, and celebrate religious and family events. Over the years since WWII, the plaza was neglected, but the memory of the once-vibrant place remained vivid in the stories of village elders.

The first edition of Sabino's Map, published in 1995, documented oral histories of these elders. It would prove to be a critical turning point for many Chimayosos. In the thirty years since its publication, the community and its people have been revitalized with the help of the Chimayó Cultural Preservation Association and the establishment of a museum on the old plaza—in the home of Usner's ancestors.

This landmark publication, read and passed on through generations, is considered a classic of New Mexico literature, alongside other treasured books including John Nichols's Milagro Beanfield War, Rudolfo Anaya's Bless Me Ultima, and Ruben Cobos's A Dictionary of New Mexico & Northern New Mexico Spanish.

Don J. Usner was born in Embudo and raised in Los Alamos and Chimayó. A cultural historian, writer, and photographer, he has authored and contributed to numerous books on New Mexico, including Benigna's Chimayó: Cuentos from the Old Plaza, Chasing Dichos through Chimayó, Valles Caldera: A New Vision for New Mexico's National Preserve (with William deBuys), and ¡Órale! Lowrider: Custom Made in New Mexico. Usner is a founding board member of the Chimayó Cultural Preservation Association.

PRINTING THE SPIRIT GUSTAVE BAUMANN'S SANTOS

By Thomas Leech and Carmella Padilla

Essays by Gustave Baumann
and Mary Austin

Poetry by Peggy Pond Church

It is perhaps taking the thing too lightly in a country where constant battle between life and desert makes the invocation of supernatural forces very necessary, but New Mexico saints have very human traits and the old santeros have made them real. — Gustave Baumann

In 1927, Gustave Baumann, already celebrated for his colorful and innovative woodcuts, turned his attention to documenting the works of traditional New Mexican santeros (saint makers). One of the first early-twentieth-century artists to recognize that the carving of bultos and the painting of retablos represented a distinct art form that merited respect and preservation on its own terms, Baumann sought to express their essence through the medium he had mastered. In the late 1920s and early 1930s, he partnered with a young New Mexico poet, Peggy Pond Church, and seasoned author Mary Austin, in the hope of publishing a book on the subject. But that book—The Little Saints of New Mexico—was never published.

In Printing the Spirit, Thomas Leech and Carmella Padilla draw from Baumann's original materials, now part of the Gustave Baumann Archive at the New Mexico History Museum, to honor Baumann's work. For the first time, Printing the Spirit brings together a selection of Baumann's faithful pencil renderings of thirty-four bultos and retablos and the proofs he made for the original book. Also included are color reproductions of some of the actual santos, now in museum collections, upon which he modeled his works; images of his original carved woodblocks; essays by Baumann and Austin; poetry by Church; and historic photographs.

Baumann scholar and printer Leech, provides an overview of Baumann's lifelong efforts to publish the book. Author and cultural historian Padilla tells an intriguing tale of Baumann, Austin, and Church's interwoven lives while contextualizing the complexities of art making in a multicultural community—in their time and ours.

Right: Gustave Baumann, San Ildefonso.

The story of Baumann's foray into saint making is a little-known aspect of the artist's luminous career. Associated more with color woodcuts of billowing summer clouds and autumn arroyos blooming with chamisa, the artist has been largely unacknowledged in discussions of Spanish Colonial art and the study and appreciation of the santos of New Mexico. Printing the Spirit is a testament to Baumann's unwavering commitment to opening the world's eyes to the quiet grace and enduring importance of the santo tradition.

Thomas Leech is an independent curator, printer, and book artist. He is former director of the Press at the Palace of the Governors (New Mexico History Museum) in Santa Fe. Carmella Padilla is a journalist and editor, and author of numerous books on New Mexico art and culture.

The New Mexicans

Kevin Bubriski

PRAISE FOR THE NEW MEXICANS

“In only two years in the state—time spent mainly in Santa Fe, Albuquerque, and parts north—Kevin Bubriski embraced New Mexico and its people. He photographed everything from tattooed manitos making pilgrimage to the Santuario de Chimayó to traditionally attired Pueblo dancers in ancient plazas, from carefully coiffed politicians courting voters to cowboys in full regalia readying to ride. Even photographs taken inside prison walls are alive with the feisty spirit of the people. For longtime New Mexicans, Bubriski’s photographs will brim with nostalgia and ring with a sense of innocence. But undercurrents of historical trauma, social inequity, pobresa, and environmental degradation have always haunted the state, and Bubriski’s images reveal shadows here and there: young boys in a bleak concrete flood-control structure with Free Us scrawled in graffiti behind them; a heavily burdened man hitchhiking beside the highway on a freezing day; men scavenging through dumpsters; weed-strewn, overgrazed landscapes.

This book is a gift to New Mexicans, holding up a mirror for us to see ourselves back in the day. The New Mexicans, 1981–83 will also captivate those not acquainted with the state, providing insight into the eccentricities and cultural richness of northern New Mexico and the diverse characters who call it home.” —Don J. Artist Statement and Visual Essay by Darby Raymond-Overstreet (Diné)

“My earliest memory of art is of my mom. Looking back at it now, I didn’t consider her an artist then because she was always home with us. Now that I’m older, I think about these things differently and know that she is an artist—she is a weaver. She was always spinning yarn, creating sash belts, and sewing baby blankets in a way that was special to me ... I can still hear her spindle dancing on the floor; the squeak of wood on linoleum; the pounding when she was weaving her belts. Those were the sounds we went to sleep to.”
—Kevin Aspaas

Shaped by the voices of contemporary weavers and practitioners and through a constellation of poetry, essays, interviews, photographs, and multimedia artworks, Horizons: Weaving Between the Lines with Diné Textiles establishes connections between weaving and photography as ways of seeing, knowing, and relating to place.

This publication coincides with an exhibition at the Museum of Indian Arts & Culture in Santa Fe on display through January 2025.

HERE, NOW AND ALWAYS VOICES OF THE FIRST PEOPLES OF THE SOUTHWEST Second Edition

Edited by Maxine E. McBrinn
Foreword by Rina Swentzell

“In these pages are the words of Native peoples of the Southwest remembering the thoughts and perceptions of our ancestors in which the beauty of life and place is acknowledged. They talk about the emergence from the womb of the Earth Mother, moving from darkness into the light of the Father Sun. They talk about traveling and searching for the center place alongside lightning, sacred clouds, rainbows, and water spiders. They remember that the center place is where prayers and songs of the mountains, the rain, the deer, and the clouds are given to the breath of the cosmos. They also remember that transformation is in our very next step, much as clouds transform before our eyes.”

"The zen circle—ensō—is wonderfully simple: an immediately brushed circle, no thinking, no planning, no trying to make it good, and presto—you yourself and the whole of reality is expressed. Circle: endless journey: every step away from the beginning is a step toward the beginning. Every step the start and the finish. In this wondrous book of photographic ensō, (including appreciations by the famed calligrapher Kazuaki Tanahashi and poet and zen monk Ninso John High), David Scheinbaum expresses a lifetime of photographic expertise—as well as a lifetime of wondrous looking, thinking, and living. Effortlessly moving in rich variety, these luminous images express the whole of the truth. You will love contemplating them again and again." —Norman Fischer, Soto Zen priest and poet.

ENSŌ WHAT IS BEHELD

By David Scheinbaum

Essay by Ninso John High

Statement by Kazuaki Tanahashi

Ensō (Zen circle) represents enlightenment. Creating ensō art is contemplative, the drawings meditative. The word “ensō” in Japanese refers to a circle that is hand drawn, often in one single brushstroke movement and one single breath. The ensō circle can be open or closed, representing either “complete” or “openness.” It symbolizes the complete cycle of life, birth, death, and rebirth. The ensō expresses our totality of being. It is the direct expression of this moment-as-it-is. It is believed that the character of the artist is fully exposed in the way their ensō is drawn.

Quarantining during the COVID pandemic offered photographer David Scheinbaum the removal of life’s distractions and the time and focus to embark on a long-desired path to work camera-less. Using the tools of a Zen calligrapher and darkroom chemistry, Scheinbaum’s creative process involved exposure of photographic paper, using various brush types brushing on chemistry under a dim safelight, sometimes using fixer, other times developer, at times both. His technique varied with each image.

This beautiful book presents a selection of Scheinbaum’s ensō drawings with an insightful essay by Zen monk and poet Ninso John High and an introduction by Zen calligrapher, teacher, author, and Buddhist translator Kazuaki Tanahashi. The book includes examples of Tanahashi’s and High’s recognizable, vibrantly colored ensōs.

BLURRED BOUNDARIES

PERSPECTIVES ON ROCK ART OF THE GREATER SOUTHWEST

By William Frej

Essay and Captions by Polly Schaafsma
Foreword by Frank Graziano

A stunning combination of words and visuals ... this book goes on to explain that rock art is not just a visual sensation but a sensory one that exceeds the bounds of words and photographs. These rock art images are often thought of as a glimpse into the past, but the authors show that they are also in the present context, an idea that combines art and science. Follow along with the authors and hopefully in the end you will be compelled to leave the pages, visit the landscape, and use all your senses to experience the blurred boundaries of rock art."—Margaret K. Berrier, KIVA: Journal of Southwestern Anthropology and History

In this book, William Frej's powerful black-and-white photographs of rock art in the American Southwest and Baja California provide the opportunity to explore this diverse and mysterious imagery. By framing these images on stone within expansive landscapes in which they are found, his photographs emphasize the importance of their settings. The accompanying photo captions by noted rock art scholar Polly Schaafsma present clues to the symbolic content of these stone murals.

SEASONS OF CEREMONIES

rites and rituals in Guatemala and Mexico

By William Frej

Introduction by Anne Frej

Essays by Gary H. Gossen, Frine Castillo Badillo and Philip E. Coyle, and Nicolasa Chávez

This book is a captivating visual record of the living traditions in Mexico and Guatemala conveyed through striking duotone photographs of community events in the region that take place within an annual cycle that refers to the pre-Columbian past, agricultural seasons, and Catholic traditions. The seasons of life are represented by colorful celebrations and rituals commemorating Mesoamerican history, culture, and religion.

Beginning with the early December celebrations of Our Lady of Guadalupe in Mexico's Yucatán, William Frej photographed thirteen celebrations including feast days of patron saints in Chiapas, Mexico, and Rabinal, Guatemala; the Carnival celebrations before Lent; Holy Week before Easter; and finally, the Day of the Dead in Oaxaca, Mexico. Three of the celebrations are distinct and unlike the others—the Masked Dance of Abraham and Isaac in Yucatán, Mexico; the Puáaxku jitsé in Santa Teresa, Nayarit, Mexico; and the Achí masked drama in Rabinal in Guatemala's highlands.

VIRGIL ORTIZ REVOLUTION

By Charles S. King

Foreword by Karen Kramer

"At times Virgil is a lone voice speaking out for a cause or a vision. He is both storyteller and provocateur. He has continually rejected his clay work as craft and refined it both in technique and content to place it as fine art. Yet within this context, the art Virgil makes remains grounded in his Pueblo culture and early life. This distinctive background illuminates his work and provides a thematic thread that weaves it together across the years. To understand his artistry, it is necessary to also understand his Pueblo world." —Charles S. King

With an artistic career spanning four decades, Virgil Ortiz (Cochiti Pueblo) is one of the most innovative artists working today. Not one to be limited or categorized, Ortiz's artistry extends across media and boundaries—challenging societal expectations and breaking taboos. Ortiz learned traditional pueblo pottery techniques through a matriline of renowned Cochiti potters, his grandmother Laurencita Herrera (1912–1984) and his mother Seferina Ortiz (1931–2007).

Virgil Ortiz: reVolution is a midcareer retrospective that presents a view into Ortiz's transformative pottery and art to illuminate his creative and artistic manifestations. With a vision that merges apocalyptic themes, science fiction, and storytelling, Ortiz's ingenuity as a contemporary artist, provocateur, activist, futurist, and preservationist extends to his creativity in pottery, design, fashion, film, jewelry, and décor.

CLEARLY INDIGENOUS NATIVE VISIONS REIMAGINED IN GLASS

By Letitia Chambers

Photos edited by Cathy Short

Published in association with the Museum of Indian Arts and Culture

The expertise of Native glass artists, in combination with the stories of their cultures, has produced a remarkable new artistic genre. This flowering of glass art in Indian Country is the result of the coming together of two movements that began in the 1960s—the contemporary Native arts movement, championed by Lloyd Kiva New, and the studio glass art movement, founded by American glass artists such as Dale Chihuly, who started several early teaching programs. Taken together, these two movements created a new dimension of cultural and artistic expression. The glass art created by American Indian artists is not only a personal expression but also is imbued with cultural heritage. Whether reinterpreting traditional iconography or expressing current issues, Native glass artists have created a rich body of work. These artists have melded the aesthetics and properties inherent in glass art with their respective cultural knowledge. The result is the stunning collection of artwork presented here.

A number of American Indian artists were attracted to glass early in the movement, including Larry "Ulaaq" Ahvakana and Tony Jojola. Among the second generation of Native glass blowers are Preston Singletary, Daniel Joseph Friday, Robert "Spooner" Marcus, Raven Skyriver, Raya Friday, Brian Barber, and Ira Lujan. This book also highlights the glass works of major multimedia artists including Ramson Lomatewama, Marvin Oliver, Susan Point, Haila (Ho-Wan-Ut) Old Peter, Joe David, Joe Fedderson, Angela Babbly, Ed Archie NoiseCat, Tammy Garcia, Carol Lujan, Rory Erler Wakemup, Lillian Pitt, Adrian Wall, Virgil Ortiz, Harlan Reano, Jody Naranjo, and several others. Four indigenous artists from Australia and New Zealand, who have collaborated with American Indian artists, are also included. This comprehensive look at this new genre of art includes multiple photographs of the impressive works of each artist.

AMERICA'S WOMEN DOWN RANGE

By Steven Clevenger

For more than two hundred years, women have served in the American Armed Forces in various capacities, aiding their country when they could not enlist themselves. In 1948, President Harry S. Truman signed the Women's Armed Services Integration Act into law, officially allowing women to serve as full, permanent members of all branches of the military, though they could not yet serve in direct combat. Just a decade ago, in 2013, the ban on women in combat was lifted, allowing them to serve in direct combat roles.

This book is an absorbing account of the contributions and experiences of a dozen women serving in the military in recent decades. Photojournalist Steven Clevenger met the women on his various assignments covering wars overseas and at their home bases in the United States, as well as through the Warrior Games and other programs for veterans. Pairing powerful photographs with interviews, Clevenger intimately captures each soldier's strength, vulnerability, and resilience, creating a poignant and heartfelt body of work that is sure to inspire anyone.

For four decades, Steven Clevenger photographed wars around the globe, including in Cambodia, El Salvador, Guatemala, Iraq, Northern Ireland, and Lebanon.

AMERICA'S FIRST WARRIORS NATIVE AMERICANS AND IRAQ

By Steven Clevenger

"In 2006, Clevenger began a three-year project documenting the warrior tradition of soldiers serving in Iraq. His work resulted in his book, America's First Warriors: Native Americans and Iraq. As an Osage [Nation member] and a war photographer, he was fascinated by modern Native American warrior culture. The definition of warrior, he writes, has been basically the same since pre-Columbian times: "A warrior is the protector of his people." The same values inherent in that code—loyalty, duty, respect, selfless service, honor, integrity, and personal courage—are elements necessary for a successful US Military career.... With his book, Clevenger reminds us of the long history of the Native American warrior, and [he] draws a through-line to the present-day military."—Sarah Handel, Daily Picture Show, National Public Radio

NEW MEXICO POETRY ANTHOLOGY 2023

Edited by Levi Romero and Michelle Otero

Published in association with the New Mexico
State Library Poetry Center

This book is an “ode and homage to nuestra querencia, our beloved homeland.” More than two hundred poems explore themes such as community, culture, history, identity, landscape, and water. From a diverse group of poets, the poems are introspective and personal; reflective and astute; steady and celebratory. Including poignant, unique, even humorous perspectives on life in New Mexico influenced by the COVID-19 pandemic, this collective of voices serves as a welcome remedio to all aspects of post-pandemic life, for ears aching for words of beauty, strength, and solace as we emerge from the cocoon of survivability.

“A seamless dance around 11 themes: community, culture, family, history, identity, landscape, nature, people, querencia, spirituality and water. Editors (and stellar New Mexico poets in their own right) Levi Romero and Michelle Otero aim for inclusion rather than definition, offering space for “personal interpretations of what it means to be threaded into the cultural fabric of the New Mexican landscape.”

DICTATORS AND THE DISAPPEARED DEMOCRACY LOST AND RESTORED

Edited by Russ Davidson and Leslie Blaugrund Kim

Introduction by Andrew Connors

Essays by Maryam Ahranjani, Francisco Letelier, Nancy Morris,
Michael Nutkiewicz, Alicia Partnoy, and Natasha Zaretsky

Published in association with the Albuquerque Museum

“Dictators and the Disappeared” is a book that should be found in every library and bookstore of democratic nations, particularly in the U.S., whose foreign policy has been instrumental in supporting dictatorships in Latin America and beyond. The featured essays are magnificently written, intertwining personal and historical memory in a way that makes this book among the most important published in the last decade. Most significantly, the ultimate mission of Dictators and the Disappeared is to not let the lives lost during these horrific eras be forgotten. It also reminds us that the pursuit of democracy must be maintained—much like the art that allows us to remember, democracy is never truly lost.”

THE BALLAD OF PLÁCIDA ROMERO A WOMAN'S CAPTIVITY & REDEMPTION

By Aulton E. "Bob" Roland

Foreword by Jerry D. Thompson

Introduction by Enrique R. Lamadrid

Afterword by Leslie Marmon Silko

A provocative yet uplifting account of survival and suspense on a fragile frontier in territorial New Mexico in the late nineteenth century.

"Early on the morning of August 8, 1881, seven Apache warriors and twelve Navajo raiders made their way on horseback down a piñon-and-ponderosa-shrouded plateau in west central New Mexico Territory to the rock and terrones La Cebolla Ranch house of Domingo and Plácida Romero Gallegos. The raiders were led by sixty-six-year-old Nana (Kas-tziden) who was determined to avenge the death of his nephew Victorio, the legendary Mimbrenño Apache leader, who had been killed ten months earlier along with most of his warriors at Cerro Tres Castillos in the Chihuahuan desert, seventy miles south of El Paso, by Mexican troops under the command of colonel Joaquín Terrazas. At La Cebolla Ranch the raiders killed Domingo Gallegos along with a ranch hand, José María Vargas, carried off Plácida Romero, and rode off into the timbered high country to the east. Near Blue Water Vega, not far from La Cebolla Ranch, Plácida was forced to hand over her nine-month-old daughter to a group of Navajos. Eventually carried into the deserts of Chihuahua, Plácida made an amazing escape in September 1881, and returned to New Mexico, where she was reunited with her family at the small rock-and-adobe outpost of Cubero. This is the story of Plácida Romero's capture, heartbreaking agony, and miraculous escape passed from generation to generation and became the subject of one of the most fascinating and captivating traditional (Hispanic) native ballads in New Mexico history."

CHASING THE CURE IN NEW MEXICO TUBERCULOSIS AND THE QUEST FOR HEALTH

By Nancy Owen Lewis

This book tells the story of the thousands of "health seekers" who journeyed to New Mexico from 1880 to 1940 seeking a cure for tuberculosis (TB), the leading killer in the United States at the time. The influx of "lungers" as they were called—many of whom remained in New Mexico—would play a critical role in New Mexico's struggle for statehood and in its growth. More than seventy sanatoriums were established around the state, laying the groundwork for the state's current health-care system. Among New Mexico's prominent lungers were artists Will Shuster and Carlos Vierra, and Bronson Cutting, who became the influential publisher of the Santa Fe New Mexican and a powerful US Senator. Others included William R. Lovelace and Edgar T. Lassetter, founders of the Lovelace Clinic, as well as Senator Clinton P. Anderson, poet Alice Corbin Henderson, and architect John Gaw Meem.

OLD SANTA FE TODAY A HISTORY & TOUR OF HISTORIC PROPERTIES

Fifth Edition, Revised & Expanded

Published in association with the
Historic Santa Fe Foundation

By Audra Bellmore

New color photography by Simone Frances

Introduction by Nancy Meem Wirth

Additional contributions by Mara Saxer, Pete Warzel, and Paul Weideman

Old Santa Fe Today is an engaging read about Santa Fe's architecture, history, and important figures through its culturally significant properties, among them churches, government buildings, and homes. The book also serves as a walking tour guide for locals and visitors wanting to sightsee.

Originally published in 1966, Old Santa Fe Today has been used by writers and scholars exploring the history and architectural significance of Santa Fe.

With new essays updating the 1991 fourth edition, this fifth edition of the classic reference book also has a complete inventory of properties—now approximately one hundred—including those recently added to the Historic Santa Fe Foundation's "Register of Properties Worthy of Preservation" since 1961. Each property entry includes revised and expanded narratives on its architecture, history, and ownership, providing social and cultural context as well.

Among the Register are the former homes of past influential artists and writers such as Olive Rush and Witter Bynner. The William Penhallow Henderson House, 555 Camino del Monte Sol, was the home of the famed painter and craftsman and his poet wife Alice Corbin Henderson. Constructed over a decade from 1917 to 1928 and designed in the Spanish Pueblo Revival Style, it would serve as a model for other artist home studios in the heart of the Santa Fe art colony. Neighbors included Cinco Pintores members Will Shuster and Fremont Ellis, writer Mary Austin, and artist Andrew Dasburg. The Fényes-Curtin House at 614 Acequia Madre has an interesting social history because of Eva Scott Fényes, the woman who built it, and her influential daughter and granddaughter whose impact on the community continues through today. The de la Peña House located at 831 El Caminito is a nineteenth-century Spanish Pueblo adobe farmhouse owned by the de la Peña family for eighty years. Artist, writer, and historic preservationist Frank Applegate purchased the home in 1925. In the late 1930s, the National Park Service added the house to its Historic American Buildings Survey, an honor reserved for the most important historic structures in the United States.

This long-awaited edition of Old Santa Fe Today provides a wealth of information that will be appreciated by anyone interested in Santa Fe architecture and historic preservation.

LINDA S. CORDELL INNOVATING SOUTHWEST ARCHAEOLOGY

Edited by Maxine E. McBrinn
and Deborah L. Huntley

Linda S. Cordell (1943–2013) was a leading archaeologist and anthropologist who began her career at a time when few women rose to prominence in the field. A professor, life-long researcher, author, field school director, department chair, and museum specialist—the study of the American Southwest, particularly the northern Rio Grande, was at the center of her life's work. Although Cordell was best known as an academic archaeologist, most of her career was spent in museum settings including fifteen years directing the University of Colorado Museum of Natural History and consulting on exhibitions for the National Museum of the American Indian.

After Cordell retired to Santa Fe, she began an even more active period. She was involved with many local organizations throughout New Mexico, including Pueblo Indian communities, Southwest Seminars, Galisteo Basin Archaeological Sites Protection Act Working Group, and Friends of Tijeras. She was a senior scholar at the School for Advanced Research (SAR) and external professor with the Santa Fe Institute. With her encyclopedic knowledge of Southwest archaeology, Cordell enjoyed leading field trips for diverse audiences and continued giving presentations at various conferences and meetings.

Among Dr. Cordell's many honors and awards in recognition of her contributions to the field of archaeology are election to the National Academy of Sciences, election to the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, and earning the Society for American Archaeology's Lifetime Achievement Award. The American Anthropological Association awarded Cordell the A. V. Kidder medal for eminence in American Archaeology, making her the second woman to have won the Kidder medal in its sixty years of existence.

Contributors to this volume in memory of Dr. Cordell are established scholars and influential Southwest archaeologists. In chapters covering diverse topics from Pueblo ceramics and tree-ring dating to Southwest migrations and NAGPRA, they offer a broad view of the Southwest as seen through the influence of one extraordinary individual. Cordell's research and work contributed to a greater understanding of Ancestral Pueblo life in the Southwest. Her legacy extends to her role as mentor to undergraduate and graduate students—many becoming renowned scholars in their fields.

FLIGHT OF SPIRIT THE PHOTOGRAPHS OF ANNE NOGGLE

Edited and Introduced by Martha A. Strawn

Foreword by Lucy R. Lippard
Essay by Lili Corbus

Published in association with the
Anne Noggle Foundation

In the history of photography, Anne Noggle (1922–2005) stands alone among the great American photographers for her powerful, wry portraits (including self-portraiture) of aging women, women’s bodies—as Noggle called it “the saga of fallen flesh.” Noggle’s unique vision has shaped the medium in ways that have yet to be adequately acknowledged. Suffusing her photographs are her profound joie de vivre, humor, and defiant humanism. Noggle took up photography after a successful career as an aviator—she had been a Women Airforce Service Pilot (WASP) during WWII, served in the Korean War, and afterward was a stunt and crop-dusting pilot in Texas. At the age of 38 she enrolled at the University of New Mexico earning a BA in art and art history and MA in photography in 1970. Noggle was the first photography curator at the New Mexico Museum of Art (formerly Museum of Fine Arts) in Santa Fe from 1970–76.

Flight of Spirit is a commemorative retrospective featuring portfolios of Noggle’s work selected by Martha A. Strawn, president of the Anne Noggle Foundation, and discussed by art historian Lili Corbus. Respected art critic and writer Lucy R. Lippard contributes the foreword.

PUEBLO PAINTER AND METALSMITH

By Diana F. Pardue and Norman L. Sandfield

Alfonso Roybal, better known as Awa Tsireh (Cat Tail Bird in the Tewa language), is considered one of the finest Native American painters of the first half of the twentieth century. For the first time, this book brings together Awa Tsireh's metalwork made during the 1930s and 1940s at the Garden of the Gods Trading Post in Manitou Springs, Colorado. Working with other Native metalsmiths, Tsireh created jewelry, platters, and other serviceware working with silver, copper, and aluminum. Awa Tsireh's recognizable and charming imagery and the quality of his hand and imagination, however, illuminate all of his pieces.

EVA MIRABAL

THREE GENERATIONS OF TRADITION AND MODERNITY AT TAOS PUEBLO

By Lois P. Rudnick with Jonathan Warm Day Coming

Eva Mirabal (Eah-Ha-Wa, Fast Growing Corn, 1920–1968) studied for six years at the Dorothy Dunn Studio art program in Santa Fe, where she was a favorite of the program's founder and served as an assistant to Dunn's successor, Geronima Montoya (P'Otsunu, 1915–2015, Ohkay Owingeh Pueblo). By the time she was twenty years old, Mirabal was exhibiting in museums and galleries across the country.

During World War II, Eva enlisted in the Women's Army Corp (WAC) in 1943, the only WAC member assigned as a full-time artist. She was very likely the first Native American woman to publish a comic strip, the feisty G. I. Gertie. During the same period, she worked on two significant mural commissions. After the war, Eva was a visiting professor of art at Southern Illinois Normal University. Following her return to Taos Pueblo, she studied at the Taos Valley Art School on the GI Bill. Throughout her lifetime, her paintings and murals received national acclaim.

Drawing on this rich and invaluable archive, as well as on interviews with family members, Rudnick tells the story of Eva's brilliant but brief and impactful career as a Taos Pueblo artist, along with the story of the artistic legacy carried on by her son Jonathan Warm Day Coming.

CULTURAL CONVERGENCE IN NEW MEXICO

INTERACTIONS IN ART, HISTORY & ARCHAEOLOGY

Honoring William Wroth

Edited by Robin Farwell Gavin and Donna Pierce

Introduction by William Wroth

Cultural Convergence in New Mexico is a volume in honor of William Wroth (1938–2019), whose career as a cultural historian and curator contributed greatly to our understanding of Spanish Colonial art in the Americas and about poetry, and helped found the poetry review Coyote's Journal.

This volume explores themes important to Wroth broadly related to the art, history, and culture of New Spain, as well as cross-cultural interactions of Hispanos and Native Americans. Wroth selected the essayists; many are colleagues he worked with over the years. They include Donna Pierce and Robin Farwell Gavin (volume editors), Richard I. Ford, Klinton Burgio-Ericson, David L. Shaul and Scott G. Ortman, José Antonio Esquibel, Cristina Cruz González, Rick Hendricks, John L. Kessell, Victor Dan Jaramillo, Don J. Usner, Lane Coulter, Jonathan Batkin, Enrique R. Lamadrid and Miguel Gandert, Orlando Romero, Jack Loeffler, and John Brandi.

GUS FOSTER AMERICAN PANORAMAS

By Gus Foster

Foreword by Larry Bell

Essays by James L. Enyeart, Edward T. Hall, and Evan M. Maurer

"In his photographs, Foster's interest in the unpredictable evidence of time's many faces is held in a kind of aesthetic suspension. . . . His personal feelings, his reactions to the reality of the moment, imbue the subject matter of his photographs. . . . Foster's photographs are silent testaments to the commingling of the eternal nature of time and the very temporal nature of our observation. . . . The result is the Zen-like beauty of Foster's panoramas, a beauty that engulfs viewers without explanation." —James L. Enyeart

This retrospective monograph is a remarkable visual record of Foster's forty-five-year journey making panoramic images and details the photographer's travels across North America and beyond. From Alaskan glaciers to Times Square in New York City, he turned his cameras on high mountain terrain and desert and urban lowlands, as well the massive acreage used for food production with its landscapes of wheat, corn, wild rice, and other crops. Also included is a selection of Time Photographs made with a portable panoramic camera capturing multiple revolutions of more than 1,000 degrees while literally recording multiple moments in time in a single image. The scale of Foster's photographs—prints measuring up to sixteen feet—are distinctive and impressive. The 360-degree angle of a Foster panorama, writes Evan M. Maurer, "turns in a circle; at one glance, you can see everything around you—to infinity from any point on the compass. As Gus told me, 'It's like having eyes in the back of your head.'"

PRETERNATURAL MICHAEL SCOTT

Foreword by Elizabeth Wiecher Pierce

Essays by Laura F. Fry, MaLin Wilson-Powell, and Amy Scott

Michael Scott's landscapes embody the primacy of place. They draw from memory, archetypes, and iconic works of the American canon. His paintings aim not to capture a landscape's particularity, as such, but to infuse it with the regenerative spirit of nature itself. He brings to the work his own sense of wonder, enabling viewers to engage with it from their own points of view. They are rewarded with a portal into America's wild places, where the elements take center stage.

As MaLin Wilson-Powell writes, "Scott's paintings offer a place where the natural world, the human world, and the world of the spirit or the soul can commingle. Together they comprise an arena that oscillates between what is there and what is not there, what the artist brings to it and what the viewer brings to it."

SHARING CODE

ART1, FREDERICK HAMMERSLEY, AND THE DAWN OF COMPUTER ART

By Patrick Frank

Foreword by Joseph Traugott

Sharing Code tells the story of Art1—a computer program developed in 1968 at the University of New Mexico—and its role in early digital creativity. The program, designed by electrical engineer Richard Williams with the encouragement of art department chair and renowned kinetic artist Charles Mattox, enabled artists who knew nothing about computers to create artworks on a large mainframe machine by sending output to a line printer. This collaboration of artists with computer engineers represents a unique period in the evolution of digital art. Art1 met with some success among a circle of artists, from Albuquerque to Minneapolis and even southern England, who used it to create hundreds of works before the program faded out of use in the mid 1970s. UNM art faculty member Frederick Hammersley took a strong interest in Art1 and in two years made over 150 works—more than any other artist—marking an important phase in his career. Sharing Code features 50 illustrations by Hammersley, Charles Mattox, Katherine Nash, and James Hill and interviews with Williams and Hill.

DOWN COUNTRY

THE TANO OF THE GALISTEO BASIN, 1250-1782

By Lucy R. Lippard

Photographs by Edward Ranney

Down Country is the history of five centuries of the Southern Tewa Pueblo Indian culture that rose, faltered, reasserted itself, and ultimately, perished in the Galisteo. The basin, twenty-two miles south of Santa Fe, is widely regarded as one of the richest archaeological regions of the country. Into this place the Tano Indians entered about 1250 AD and for three centuries made it a center for culture and trade. Their story is a powerful human history that is a microcosm of New Mexico's dramatic, complex history of pre-European settlement and post-Spanish occupation.

PAINTED REFLECTIONS

ISOMERIC DESIGN IN ANCESTRAL PUEBLO POTTERY

By Scott G. Ortman and Joseph Traugott

Foreword by Maxine McBrinn and Antonio R. Chavarria

“This is a serious analysis of what amounts to a world view by Pueblo culture, one that embraced the mirror balance of life—male/female, earth/sky, life/spirit world—as one, a whole, the elements of each mirror images of the other... a finely thought, written, and illustrated book.”

—Historic Santa Fe Foundation

This fascinating study focuses on the “isomeric” designs that make Ancestral Pueblo pottery distinctive. The spatial illusions and optical reversals painted on Ancestral pottery is compared here to isomers in chemistry that refer to compounds that are identical but have mirror-image structures. Featuring one hundred examples of the painting tradition, the book takes a closer look at the psychology, history, and cultural significance of this unique aspect of Ancestral Pueblo painting, providing fascinating revelations into the very foundations of Pueblo culture.

PUEBLO CHICO

LAND AND LIVES IN GALISTEO SINCE 1814

By Lucy R. Lippard

In her second book on Galisteo, New Mexico, cultural historian Lucy R. Lippard writes about the place she has lived for a quarter century. The history of a place she refers to as Pueblo Chico (little town) is based largely on other people's memories—those of the descendants of the original settlers in the early 1800s, heirs of the Spanish colonizers and the indigenous colonized who courageously settled this isolated valley despite official neglect and threats of Indian raids. The memories of those who came later—Hispano and Anglo—also echo through this book. But too many lives have already receded into the land, and few remain to tell the stories. The land itself has the longest memory, harboring traces of towns, trails, agriculture, and other land use that goes back thousands of years.

ONE HUNDRED ASPECTS OF THE MOON JAPANESE WOODBLOCK PRINTS BY YOSHITOSHI

By Tamara Tjardes

Yoshitoshi (1839–1892) was the last great woodblock print master of the Ukiyo-e tradition, and One Hundred Aspects of the Moon is regarded as his greatest achievement. Yoshitoshi was born in the city of Edo (Tokyo) shortly before Japan’s violent transformations from a medieval to a modern society. He was keenly interested in preserving traditional Japanese culture against the inclusions of modernism, and his prints celebrate the glory of Japan in its mythology, literature, history, the warrior culture, and fine woodblock print tradition.

CLAY PEOPLE

Compiled and edited by Jonathan Batkin

Around 1880, potters of Cochiti Pueblo began making large standing figures of circus performers, cowboys, merchants, and other outsiders who, with the coming of the railroad, encroached increasingly on the Pueblo world. Made by the traditional coil-and-scrape method, these expressive and frankly satirical figures were masterpieces of design and execution, standing as tall as thirty inches without support. At the same time, potters of Tesuque Pueblo developed their own tradition—smaller, seated figures that became known as Rain Gods. Both figurative styles were marketed aggressively by curio dealers in shops and via mail order. Before their popularity waned in the 1930s, they found their way into collections throughout the United States and Europe. This catalogue presents both historic and contemporary views of Pueblo Indian ceramics inspired by the human form. Seldom seen, century-old masterpieces from Cochiti and Tesuque Pueblos reveal the imagination and skill of nineteenth and early twentieth century artists while contemporary potters bring the tradition into the present.

¡ÓRALE! LOWRIDER CUSTOM MADE IN NEW MEXICO

Essay by Don J. Usner

Interview by Katherine Ware

Photography selections by Daniel Kosharek and Katherine Ware

“The book is eye-opening on several levels. . . . The amazing photography of amazing cars and their owners, and of what many would consider the shade-tree mechanics—cottonwoods in the case of northern New Mexico—who transform aging Detroit iron into brilliantly painted works of kinetic art that not only move forward and back but up and down, and sometimes dramatically so. But on another level, the book is eye-opening in explaining not only the history of the lowrider phenomenon, but its place in a people’s very culture. . . . [The book] describes the pride of those who build and own the New Mexico low riders, and also applies to how buyers of this book will come to feel about it as they go low and slow through its pages.”—ClassicCars.com

OBLIQUE VIEWS AERIAL PHOTOGRAPHY AND SOUTHWEST ARCHAEOLOGY

Photographs by Charles A. Lindbergh,
Anne Morrow Lindbergh, and Adriel Heisey

Edited by Maxine E. McBrinn
Essays by Linda J. Pierce and Erik O. Berg

“In 1929, two years after his epic cross-Atlantic solo flight, Charles Lindbergh and his new wife Anne embarked on another novel exploration. Alfred V. Kidder, who was excavating at Pecos Pueblo in New Mexico, asked them to photograph some of the dramatic archaeological sites in the southwest.... Lindbergh jumped at the challenge after being impressed by Maya ruins in the Yucatán he saw from the air in 1928.... In this breathtaking book the Lindbergh photos are combined with recent photos of many of the same sites by noted aerial photographer Adriel Heisey.... Oblique Views is a striking contribution to the history of archaeological research in the American Southwest.”

PERDIDO SIERRA SAN LUIS

By Michael P. Berman

Foreword by Tim DeChristopher
Essay by Rodrigo Sierra Corona
Afterword by Valer Clark

“No estoy perdido.... The border throws you off, but it also wakes you up. I was not always this comfortable here, and it is a bit of a story how I fell in love with the Sierra San Luis. It starts with the day I saw the last Mexican wolf on American soil—not one of the reintroduced ones with leather dog-collar trackers strapped around their necks, but a wild one up from Sonora or maybe Durango—and it ended when an old Mexican rancher, the man who killed the same wolf, opened a locked gate for me and let me in.”

VOICES OF COUNTERCULTURE IN THE SOUTHWEST

Edited by Jack Loeffler and Meredith Davidson

“From the shadow of D. H. Lawrence to Ed Abbey’s fierce presence, from Georgia O’Keeffe to Rina Swentzell—savvy Native Americans, Anglo hippies, inspired Hispanics—the entire range of countercultural vision (and some foolishness) is presented here. The wonders of peyote became transformed into a new environmental consciousness, the labor of gardening became a belief in a better future, the festivals and communes opened hearts and minds. The American Southwest has been one of the most creative and transformative places in the entire country over the last eighty years. This is a remarkable gathering of brave firsthand documents and hopes.”

ADVENTURES IN PHYSICS AND PUEBLO POTTERY

MEMOIRS OF A LOS ALAMOS SCIENTIST

By Francis H. Harlow with Dwight P. Lanmon

“A list of the successes in the life of Francis H. Harlow is full of superlatives—not just about enterprise, but also because of the diversity of his interests and exploits.”—Paul Weideman, Pasatiempo

This touching memoir by Francis H. Harlow (1928–2016) reveals a life unlike any other. A physicist with a fifty-year career at Los Alamos National Laboratory and significant contributions to the field of fluid dynamics, he became a leading authority on Pueblo Indian pottery, a “hobby” he pursued after moving to New Mexico. From fossils to ceramics, his passion grew with his interest in the Pueblo potters who created the masterpieces he admired. Classifying and dating pottery over a span of forty years, he earned a reputation for being able to identify distinct Pueblo styles and periods that had not been previously documented. Over the years, his respectful friendships with Pueblo artists including San Ildefonso potter Maria Martinez informed his expertise. His scientific and scholarly pursuits were augmented by his artistic talent as a painter.

IN SEARCH OF DOMINGUEZ & ESCALANTE

PHOTOGRAPHING THE 1776 SPANISH EXPEDITION THROUGH THE SOUTHWEST

By Greg MacGregor and Siegfried Halus

Essay by Joseph P. Sánchez

On July 29, 1776, Franciscan friars Francisco Atanasio Dominguez and Silvestro Velez de Escalante embarked on an expedition to seek an overland route from Santa Fe, New Mexico, to Monterey, California. Although the Spaniards did not reach their final destination, the expedition is widely regarded as one of the great explorations in western US history for its documentation of the land and Native people in the Four Corners. The group—including cartographer Don Bernardo Miera y Pacheco, Ute-speaking guides, and the alcalde (mayor) of Zuni—circumnavigated 1,800 miles of uncharted territory never before seen by Europeans. More than two hundred years later Greg MacGregor, and Siegfried Halus have created a remarkable visual record of the expeditionary route, documenting the frontier as first witnessed by the Spanish explorers on horseback. The expedition passed through what today are major national parks and landforms: Zion Canyon, Dinosaur Monument, and the Grand Canyon.

At the end of their journey, they too will visit the Nativity and bring their own gifts on this magical night.

Córdova provides the colorful and warm new illustrations for this story. Season of Renewal, Anaya's narrative of Christmastime in his native state, first appeared thirty years ago in the Los Angeles Times and recounts traditions that continue in New Mexico to this day, including the reenactments of revered Nativity stories Los Pastores and Las Posadas and family traditions of Misa del Gallo (Midnight Mass) and Mis Crismes (the phrase called out by children as they visit their neighbors to receive traditional gifts of candy, nuts, and fruit, much as trick-or-treaters do on Halloween). Finally, in A Child's Christmas in New Mexico, 1944, Anaya presents readers with a poem in which he recalls his boyhood wonder and excitement from family traditions."—School Library Journal

A DICTIONARY OF NEW MEXICO & SOUTHERN COLORADO SPANISH

Revised and Expanded Edition

By Rubén Cobos

As a teenager in Albuquerque, esteemed linguist and folklorist Rubén Cobos (1911–2010) was intrigued by and began documenting the regional variations of spoken Spanish. This was to become his work of a lifetime, spanning seventy-five years. Dr. Cobos began recording Indo-Hispanic folklore material in the early 1940s. With the cooperation of the villagers, farmers, sheepherders, and other hard-working people in the small towns throughout New Mexico and Southern Colorado, he recorded the nuances, slang, and the regionally distinctive words of Spanish spoken in the communities of the upper Rio Grande and Southern Colorado.

In an April 9, 2023 New York Times article titled "New Mexico is Losing a Form of Spanish Spoken Nowhere on Earth," Simon Romero wrote the unique Spanish spoken in this region for over 400 years may be dying out. However, collective interest in retaining language—culture—is as palpable as it was decades ago when Cobos compiled his now-classic A Dictionary of New Mexico & Southern Colorado Spanish. The dictionary, continuously in print since 1983, has become a classic Spanish reference book, widely used in classrooms across the United States. Its author spent a decade on the second revised and much expanded edition published in 2003. A Dictionary of New Mexico & Southern Colorado Spanish has assumed its place as the most authoritative reference on the archaic dialect of Spanish spoken in this part of the world.

ORIGINS OF NEW MEXICO FAMILIES

A GENEALOGY OF THE SPANISH COLONIAL PERIOD

By Fray Angélico Chávez

Fray Angélico Chávez was an American Franciscan priest, historian, researcher, author, poet, and painter. As archivist for the Santa Fe Archdiocese, he undertook the cataloguing and translating of Spanish archives that allowed for a reevaluation of the history of New Mexico. His contributions to New Mexico history and literature earned him honorary degrees including Master of Arts and Doctor of Humane Letters from, respectively, the University of New Mexico and New Mexico State University.

Chavez's definitive work Origins of New Mexico Families: A Genealogy of the Spanish Colonial Period was originally published in 1954 and a revised and expanded edition was issued in 1992 by the Museum of New Mexico Press. The book has been continuously in print since. Origins of New Mexico Families is the starting place for Nuevomexicanos exploring their ancestry and for anyone interested in New Mexico history during the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries.

"The full stories behind each name and note, too lengthy to include here, have furnished me with a knowledge of Spanish [colonial] times that I could not have been acquired in any other way.... [The] compilation will also prove useful to others...working in any field of research having to do with the first two centuries of New Mexico's existence as a Spanish colony.... New Mexicans interested in their remote forebears will find it intriguing as well as revealing" —Fray Angélico Chávez
